

White Mourning a Late Innovation for Young People

In mourning, simplicity is the keynote of good taste. The wardrobe should be chosen for conservative good style and inconspicuousness.

A mourning top-coat of heavy black cloth with a soft dull finish made into one of the smart loose cape coats so much the rage, is most desirable. The Oxford effects may be used for general wear. For suits, gabardine of serge with a dull finish is serviceable and smart. Pure white or dull black linings should be used.

Soft faille silk with a dull luster is used for the more dressy type of suit. Ripple silk, which is a heavy variety of Canton silk may be used, also, for this type of costume.

Cire Crepe Trimmed with Bands of Colored Silk

For an afternoon dress crepe de Chine is most attractive and distinctive. One charming feature of this silk is that it may be self-trimmed, and, if anything, this enhances its beauty. All costumes worn for first mourning may be combined with crepe. But crepe should be used sparingly, as too much is in poor taste.

From among a number of mourning dresses I picked out models for my illustrations which are conservative and stylish, both showing the attractive use of crepe and dull silk as a trimming.

The first is of dull crepe satin. At the lower edge of the long tunic is a wide band of corded silk cut on the bias. This same silk is used to edge the V-shaped opening of the overwaist front and back. A long sleeved guimpe of net is worn with this dress whose most noticeable feature is its stiffling standing frill of lace at the neck. The plain hat is of crepe satin with trimming of the corded silk and of gathered maline.

Vole and net are two materials widely used for Summer and Fall dresses and for mourning, when variety is limited, it is very smart. My second illustration shows a dress of black voile. The skirt with triple circular ruffles has a band of crepe edging each ruffle. The waist is made with kimono-cut sleeves having a circular cuff which is also trimmed with a band of crepe as is the front of the voile waist. The chemise and collar are of black net over white and hemstitched. A wide girde of crepe which buttons down the front completes the costume.

A charming dress of net is made with a waist in bolero, effect. Around the edges of this bolero, which extends to the shoulder and underarm seams only, is a ball fringe of dull black wooden beads. In the corners of the bolero are beaded motifs in very fine dull black beads.

Chiffon cloth is widely used for mourning waists and lends itself charmingly to the simple shirtings. Black point-d'esprit is combined with net in many ways and makes a greater variety possible.

Dull satin with the waxed finish is used for waists as well as crepe de

Chine and crepe chiffon. A waist of black crepe de Chine is made with a chemise of net picot edged and trimmed with picot edged frills of the crepe de Chine.

Georgette crepe in black or white is used both for waists and for the soft clinging type of gown. It is charming trimmed with either faille, taffeta or dull satin.

All costumes worn for first mourning can be trimmed with crepe, and white crepe is smart when used at the neck for the collar or vest, and for the cuffs as well.

For young people all white is being used a great deal for mourning. It is not as depressing as black and yet it is just as much a badge of sorrow. All-white hats of lusterless taffeta are trimmed with white crepe flowers, or a small, close-fitting hat of white has a large Empress Eugene veil in white precisely following the black widow's veil of the same name. This style of veil is heavy and smothering for very hot weather, although it is a protection from kindly but curious eyes. It is a large hemmed square of crepe with one corner rounded out to fit the neck, finished with a frill of the same. It is fastened around the neck with the long point hanging down in front and is then thrown over the head and fastened securely to the hat with pins. It is unusually graceful and most becoming.

White chiffon cloth is used for the dresser dresses. I saw a charming one made of box-pleated chiffon cloth and the skirt had a box-pleated tunic with a wide hem. Just above the hem was an inset insertion of point-d'esprit. This frock was remarkable for its charming inconspicuousness.

Sheer collars and cuffs of organdy are accessories which may be used. Hemstitched, or with hems fagoted, they give a finish and a dainty touch, which helps to take away the dreariness of all black.

Collars and cuffs of organdy have hems of black which are attached to the collar by machine hemstitching. The woman with a little ingenuity and time to spare can make many variations of these dainty accessories.

Handkerchiefs are shown with hems of black either a half an inch or an inch wide. Some have a second border on the inside of black. It may be merely a pin stripe or it may be three-eighths of an inch.

A Mourning Gown of Conservative Style in Voile and Crepe

In mourning very little jewelry is worn, and that must be the simplest of the simple. Pearls and dull jet are combined into artistic little pins and necklaces. Dull black enamel pins are also used.

Hems of ruffles and of dresses are hemstitched or are finished with a picot edging, which is merely having a piece of the material hemstitched, then cut down the center of the hemstitching; this leaves a picot edging on either side.

Shoes should be worn of dull black kid. The low shoe should have a dull kid buckle while flat button of jet is correct.

Gloves, of course, are always black.

JACKET YOUR MILK CANS

It has been found that milk that has to be sent only short distances or preserved for only a few hours should maintain a temperature of less than 50 degrees. Even at these temperatures some bacteria will multiply and cause the souring of the milk, but the increase is slow and during a few hours no serious results will occur. A temperature well below 50 degrees F., however, materially decreases the rate of bacterial growth.

On the other hand, where milk is to be shipped long distances, the initial temperature must be lower, assuming that no provision is made for maintaining the original temperature during transportation. Where milk is in transit for several hours, it is necessary to cool it down to near the freezing point. So soon as the milk can, however, is exposed to air temperature, and especially to the sun, the temperature of the milk begins to rise rapidly, and every precaution should be taken to keep it from being raised by the outside heat.

A series of experiments was recently made in shipping milk cooled to 50 degrees. In these cases the cans were set in an open truck with no covering to shield them from the direct rays of the sun. The milk was hauled a distance of 13 miles, and the average temperature during the trip was 82.65 degrees. The experiment showed that the cans that were hair-quilt jacketed showed a rise of only 5% degrees in three hours in the temperature of the milk. The cans that were wrapped with wet burlap showed a milk temperature of 58% degrees in the same period, or a rise of 8% degrees. The milk in the unjacketed cans rose in three hours to 78% degrees, or a rise of 28% degrees.

It is obvious from these figures that it pays to jacket the cans in order to maintain a low temperature during transportation.
